Spencer Parkinson

Spencer Parkinson is the Executive Director for Decision Innovation Solutions.

In his current role with Decision Innovation Solutions, Spence is responsible for business generation, ensuring client satisfaction, and managing the overall operations of the business. He also seeks to understand clients' data challenges, propose potential solutions, and work with clients to enhance their decision-making processes.

Originally from the southeastern Idaho/northern Utah corridor, Spence relocated to the Des Moines area in 2005 when he began working as a Research Analyst for the Iowa Farm Bureau. Areas of research at Farm Bureau included agricultural policy analysis and economic modeling related to several industries important to Iowa agriculture. Spence also has experience instructing QuickBooks classes to farmers while working as a Research Assistant for Utah State University Extension. Spence also obtained extensive production agriculture experience through his 12 years on a northern Utah dairy farm.

Spence earned a dual BS degree in Accounting and Economics from Utah State University. He also earned an International MBA in Food and Agribusiness from the Royal Agricultural College in Cirencester, England.
